Aging

The problems of the aging include health care availability and costs, unemployment, unawareness of community programs for them, and the need of those community programs for adequate funding.

Pittsburgh is, by age and population, the second oldest city in America. People retire in Pittsburgh and make Allegheny County their home. Taxes are high, many people cannot afford to keep their homes, and have difficulty coping with aging.

Dialogue

Host Liz Randolph and Katherine Butchko, Allegheny county Area Agency on Aging, discussed the fact that our population is growing older. Soon, the elderly will become the largest age group. Many elderly are living at or below the poverty level.

Host Shelley Duffy and The United Way's representative Blodwyn Carned, talked about the "Care Givers" program designed to help the elderly and those that are physically impaired.

Host Shelley Duffy and two members of the newly formed Pittsburgh Chapter of the Grey Panthers discussed the need to revamp the health care system, to combat age discrimination and to prepare for the slow aging of the American population.

Pittsburgh Opinion

Do you think as people get older they should be required to take another driving test

Do you think senior citizens are really benefitting from the state lottery system

How would you like to spend your "golden years"

What is your greatest fear about getting old

What's the one thing you hope to accomplish in life

When, in your opinion, are the "golden years"

Would you feel comfortable putting your parents in a nursing home today

Animal Welfare

There is concern in Pittsburgh for abandoned and stray dogs and cats. The problem is related to overbreeding. There is also an increasing problem with cruelty to animals.

There are many stray dogs, and the Humane Society is over crowded and under staffed. Lack of donations make this an extremely difficult situation. Pets are abandoned, and there is a lack of funding to deal with the problem

Host Liz Randolph and Edward Blotzer, Chief Humane Officer of Animal Care and Welfare, discussed new legislation passed by the state aimed at protecting animals from abuse.

Host Liz Randolph interviewed Mary Ann Evashwick, President of the Western Pennsylvania and vice-president of the American Dog Owners Association, working to prevent the passage of legislation that feel discriminates against Pitt Bull owners

Host Shelley Duffy and Hollywood Animal Trainer, Bryan Renfro, talked about what it's like and what it takes to train some of Hollywood's most famous animals, like Benji, also tips on animal training and care home.

News

Dorothy Zewe, Administrative Assistant, Human Society on the Northside, talks about "Be Kind to Animals Week" and how you can take home a pet or make a contribution to help maintain the animals in shelters.

Phyllis Wright, Humane Society of America, talks about why Halloween is a bad time to adopt a black cat--it could cost it its life because some people think they have "mystical" powers.

Pittsburgh Opinion

Do you think animals should continue to be used extensively in lab tests

Do you think animals that are declared vicious should be destroyed

Do you think there should be stricter penalties for animal abuse

How do you feel about hunting deer and other animals for sport

What do you think about killing animals just for the use of their fur

Business and Labor

Pittsburgh needs to attract new business and industry. The manufacturing sector is eroding. Steel manufacture is changing and there is a need for new industrial parks.

Taxes are high, which makes it difficult for Pittsburgh to attract new industry. Population has been declining for the last 20 years, causing an erosion of the work force. More skilled people are needed, but not necessarily college educated.

Dialogue

Host Liz Randolph and Leo Puman, business representative of the Pittsburgh Building and Construction Trades Council, discussed the labor movement in Pittsburgh.

Host Liz Randolph and Father Jay Geisler of the St. Titus Church in Aliquippa and LTV retiree Lyle Shaffer discussed the need for federal legislation to prevent companies from abandoning their obligation to workers, if and when they file bankruptcy.

Host Liz Randolph and Pittsburgh's Promotions Director Holly Van Dine discussed her goals, foremost of which is to change the image of "the smoky city."

Host Liz Randolph and Richard Kerlin, Pittsburgh area career centers for LTV Steel, talked about how LTV is currently seeking protection from its creditors under bankruptcy laws.

Host Liz Randolph and Robert Doyle of the American College, a college that caters to financial advisors, discussed the need for such advisors.

Host Liz Randolph and the director of the local chapter of SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives), outlined how the group helps business people learn from their mistakes and become more profitable.

Host Liz Randolph interviewed Mike Adams, the president of Local 13550. He discussed the key stumbling blocks preventing a settlement such as cost of living increases, job security, and 44 other concessions still on the table needing to be resolved.

Host Liz Randolph interviewed President of United Steelworkers Union Local 1397 on labor's side of the USX Steel strike, saying that this strike is crucial to the future of organized labor and that the steel workers are prepared to "tough it out."

Host Liz Randolph interviewed a Carnegie Mellon University Business Professor about an upcoming workshop on starting a business. He said one of the reasons Southwestern PA has not prospered as the rest of the nation is lack of entrepreneurs.

Host Liz Randolph interviewed the president and vice-president of the Pennsylvania Nurses Association, Local 705, who went on strike July 1st fighting for wages and benefits.

Host Liz Randolph talked to Charles Kerwig who has been touring the country on behalf of the American Bankers Association. They discussed the banking industry and gave us some background on why so many banks failed in 1986.

Host Liz Randolph talked to Sal Levine of the Service Corps. of Retired Executives. Levine offered pointers to people starting small businesses and related current statistics and common problems facing the small businessperson and ways to get help.

Host Liz Randolph talked to Vice-President of Pittsburgh's National Bank about management's side of the labor strike by the steelworkers against U.S. Steel, the impact on the economy, and the future of the Mon Valley steel industry.

Host Liz Randolph talks to Pat Landy about the Labor Day Parade and the labor movement in Pittsburgh.

Host Shelley Duffy and Bill Byham, author and co founder of Developmental Dimensions International in Pittsburgh, talked about his book and ways to make the workplace better for all, thus increasing productivity. It's called empowerment.

Host Shelley Duffy and Dr. Leon Warsaw, the Executive Director of the New York Business Group on Health, talked about how to handle stress in the workplace and how avoiding it makes a better employee.

Host Shelley Duffy and Jean Marzollo talked about maternity leaves for women who have just had a baby, how they can take advantage of what they're entitled to and how to know what they're entitled to.

Host Shelley Duffy and Jim Klingensmith and Bill Unites of two Labor Groups in Pittsburgh, talked about Labor Day and how unions have worked to dispel the bad image many Americans have of them.

Host Shelley Duffy and William Thorbeck, Chairman of MIT Enterprises, talked about their recent forum, a presentation by a growing company which presents its business plan to a panel of entrepreneurs to critique.

Host Shelley Duffy and guest discussed "The Pittsburgh Job Corp" and how it can work for you.

Host Shelley Duffy and members of the Mon valley Progress Council discussed the various programs available to help local businesses expand, and to help new businesses locate to the Mon Valley to turn the Valley into a service based economy.

Host Shelley Duffy and the founder of M.S.T.I. School of Robotics, Frank Sanns, talked about how Pittsburgh has made a comeback since the fall of the steel industry. He explained how his school has helped bring the future to Pittsburgh.

News

Attorney Jay Hornack of the Steel Valley Authority wants to see if it would be profitable to restart the electric furnaces at the LTV Southside works as an employee owned corporation.

Bernard Powers, Director of Federal Programs Dept. of Allegheny County, noted that other areas of country, now considered to be in worse shape economically than PA, will get money for federal programs that, until now, flowed into Allegheny County.

Bill Larue, spokesman for Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, detailed workers concerns. They are afraid P&LE will use special loophole in law, eliminate hundreds of jobs and accumulated benefits when P. and L.E. is sold to Chicago West Pullman Compa

Business Manager of the Pittsburgh Building and Construction Trade Council discussed the Mayor's veto of the prevailing wage bill.

Businessman Bruce Really discussed how a Toshia ban would hurt many businesses.

Carol Coletus, Bell Telephone employee, explains who will be affected first by the recent strike by workers against the company.

City Controller discussed the expected override vote of the Mayor's bill allowing for stricter enforcement of prevailing wage laws.

Congressman Bill Coyne talked about legislation he introduced that would count the so-called "discouraged worker". By counting the "discouraged worker" we can accurately gauge the full picture of the unemployment problem in Pennsylvania.

Coreen Laboon, spokeswoman for the Greater Pittsburgh Visitors and Convention Bureau, said that the economic value of conventions booked in the past years was $150 million.

Dan Edwards, Pittsburgh Steelers, talked about NFL Players' strike. Said that many issues needed to be and might never be resolved. He predicted Steelers would not be divided by strike.

Debbie Lucas, President of the Pennsylvania Nurses Association, detailed the main stumbling blocks of the nurses's strike.

Evan Stoddard of the Urban Redevelopment Authority discussed the fact that merchants will be able to apply for special loans to upgrade the outside of their buildings.

Father Jay Geisler, St. Titus Roman Catholic Church, Aliquippa, was one of several demonstrators arrested at a protest at LTV Steel's Aliquippa works. He was protesting the fact that company decided it would cancel pension and health benefits

Gary Hart, Presidential Candidate, talked about how steel, energy and agriculture industries are on their backs and that he has a plan for their revitalization.

Henry Lenard, editor of the Pittsburgh Business Times talked about the available retail space in downtown Pittsburgh.

Irene Thomas, Black Trade Unionists, spoke out in support of legislation aimed at bolstering the minimum wage.

Jack Robers, President of the Association of Iron and Steel Engineers, talked about new so called concessionary contracts that are becoming more and more prevalent in domestic steel industry.

Jay Hornack, Steel Valley Authority, said that SVA is confident that the LTV south Side plant can be reopened and operated profitably.

Jerry Gross, Bell Telephone, talks about the company coming through with a new, satisfactory contract. Workers in 15 states are striking 3 regional companies.

Joe Fiori, spokesman Urban Redevelopment Authority, discussed basics of a URA loan program for low and middle income families who want to make home improvements.

Judy Boren, Edward Christ and Linda Spitzagle of the North and South Allegheny School Districts, discussed collective bargaining for teachers' salaries, in order to settle work stoppage.

Leroy Zimmerman, State Attorney General, is urging passage of legislation to regulate health club industry. Wants to end lifetime memberships unless new clubs post $25,000 per location to cover refunds if they fold.

Manager Heather Broadhead of Manpower, Inc., reported that 17% of Pittsburgh businesses expected to add to their staffs between July and September.

Mathew Lesko, best selling business author, talks about "Macho" - Women who start their own business and why they're more successful at it than men!

Mike Stout of USW Local 1397, discussed a new agreement with USX Corp.

Nancy Vahn, USAir, said that merger of USAir and Piedmont would create an airline which will be able to compete with the giants.

Neil Vanderdussen, President Chief operating officer of Sony Corporation, talks about a new TV tube making plant moving into Westmoreland County.

Norm Robertson, Chief Economist of Mellon Bank, discussed fact that though dollar has been dropping on world markets, there's been talk of a trade war with Japan.

Phil Katz of the Beer Institute discussed the proposed tax that would triple the excise tax on beer.
